Could the client clarify if the 50+ screen count includes dedicated Dark Mode mockups, or if we should focus solely on the primary light theme?

@Aishkhan Great question. For the initial phase, please focus only on the Light Theme. We can discuss Dark Mode implementation and scoping separately later.

The image shows the homepage of Collabify, a platform for hiring designers, jobs, and companies. At the top, there's a navigation bar with links for Home, Find Designers, Find Jobs, About, and a user profile icon. Below the navigation is a main banner with the tagline "Confidence in Every Hire. Product Design, Simplified." followed by a subtext: "Access senior, project-ready talent and launch your next feature faster, knowing the UX is backed by vetted expertise". A search bar with placeholder text "Search Designers, Jobs, Companies....." and a magnifying glass icon is positioned below the banner. The main content area features a navigation bar with tabs: All Projects, UI/UX Design (which is selected and highlighted in purple), Mobile App, Web app, and Graphic Design. Below this, a section titled "Featured Designers" displays profiles for six designers, each with a circular profile picture, name, title, a short bio, a 4.0 rating with reviews, location (Remote), hourly rate ($05/Hr), and a "Hire Me" button. To the right of the featured designers is a "Post Projects" button. At the bottom, there are two rows of three more designer profiles each, arranged in a grid format.

The main area displays a messaging screen. On the left, there are four message bubbles from different users:
